Overview
Doctoral programs in the Faculty of Health provide in-depth research training in a particular area of health while broadening a candidate's knowledge in one or more of the following discipline areas: ageing; physical activity, disability, injury and rehabilitation; health and wellbeing; human behaviour; vision; and accident research. Students enrol in one of the five schools in the Faculty of Health (Human Movement Studies, Nursing and Midwifery, Optometry, Psychology and Counselling, or Public Health) or the Social Work and Human Services Academic Unit.

Entry requirements
Applicants must hold a relevant first or second-class division A (upper division) honours degree or an appropriate masters degree. In addition, international students must meet English language proficiency requirements.

Course Structure
Candidates undertake a supervised program of research and investigation that results in the submission of a thesis. The program of study may be supported by some coursework related to the conduct of research and preparation of the thesis. Candidates are required to have regular interaction with supervisors and to participate in University scholarly activities such as research seminars, events and training.

Doctoral studies may be completed in any area of research interest supported by the Faculty of Health. Current areas include

- Movement coordination and control
- Injury prevention and Rehabilitation
- Fitness, health and wellbeing

The descriptions of research specialisations available are provided as a guide only and research in other related areas is welcomed.

International Student Entry
QUT advises that international students may enrol only in full-time studies.
